Vodafone brings freedom to the internet

Vodafone is ending limits to VoIP services

Starting April 1, all retail packages including mobile internet sold by Vodafone Hungary will come with the possibility to use internet-based based VoIP and messaging services without any limitation on Vodafone's 98,4% coverage mobile broadband network, as announced by chief executive Diego Massidda.

The announcement involves all customers of retail Go, Go Plus and Red packages, users of the MobilNet (Basic, M, L, XL) mobile internet data packages and the Red business packages Üzleti Red, Vállalkozói Fix and Osztható.

Vodafone was the first in Hungary to introduce unlimited calls and text messaging, Massidda noted. Continuing with its pioneering habits, Vodafone is among the firsts again to lift all restrictions on VoIP services and is now allowing internet-based voice exchanges and chat services to be used on its platform.

The spread of mobile internet also sparked growing popularity for internet-based calls and chat services. Thanks to the reliable high capacity and countrywide broadband mobile internet Vodafone network VOIP services can be used without any speed limit or contractual restriction.

Vodafone customers may also use our own Vodafone Message+ service. Available on any Android device running the operating system version 2.3 or up, it can facilitate group communication as well as sharing photos, songs, videos, or gps coordinates. Vodafone Message+ makes sure messages are delivered even if the recipient isn't a Vodafone user, or if they are unavailable. The service is available for download from the Google Play app store.
